Extreme CCTV to be Featured on Discovery Channel's "Daily Planet"

VANCOUVER - Extreme CCTV Inc. (TSX:EXC), the global leader in the design, development and manufacture of active-infrared night vision surveillance equipment, announces that it will be featured on an upcoming episode of Discovery Channel Canada's "Daily Planet" airing the week of March 12th, 2007.

The "Daily Planet" feature will showcase Extreme's most advanced surveillance technologies ranging from its license plate capture solutions, to its facial recognition imagers, to its extreme performance night vision cameras. The feature will also include actual ballistic testing footage demonstrating Extreme cameras head-to-head against gunfire.

Additionally, the episode will profile an interview in which Jack Gin, President and CEO of Extreme CCTV, comments on what makes the Burnaby-based company a world-leader in surveillance technologies with successful deployments for the US Department of Homeland Security, at national landmarks such as the Eiffel Tower and for Canada's Department of National Defence.

"Extreme CCTV is a global engineering company recognized in the security industry for its advanced surveillance technology," says Jack Gin. "The 'Daily Planet' feature will allow us to show the viewing public how Extreme's world-leading technology is used and how it helps preserve global security."
